

INTERNATIONAL CARE MINISTRIES 2011-12 ANNUAL REPORT

INTERNATIONAL CARE MINISTRIES (ICM)

has been serving the poor in the Philippines since 1992.

Teaching essential life skills through a supportive, community-based approach, ICM unleashes unfulfilled potential in impoverished communities.

We partner with local leaders from 2,500 slums to empower more than 100,000 people every year to fight the bondage of poverty. After participating in our transforming values, health and livelihood training program, our families experience a 42% reduction in reported physical abuse, a 26% reduction in serious illness and a 33% increase in household income.

ICM provides help, inspires hope, and creates change.

THOSE WE HELP

ICM is committed to effectiveness. We aim to change lives.

In order to quantify the impact of our programs, ICM has interviewed 32,000 of our participants throughout the past year, compiling 4 million individual responses to our questions. This detailed demographic data gives ICM an unparalleled ability to measure the impact of our programs and to tailor future programs for enhanced effectiveness.

TRANSFORM PROGRAM

TRANSFORM PROGRAM

Those in ICM's programs live in extreme poverty. Providing jobs or food or access to clean water isn't enough. They also need education. They need better hygiene and health practices. They need access to medical care. They need a community of sustained support. They need to know there is a way out. They need hope.

ICM's Transform Program is designed to address the holistic needs of those living in such adversity. The centerpiece of the Transform Program is our VHL education curriculum emphasizing positive Values, Health practices and Livelihood skills.

“ICM works in an integrated way, drawing on the heart of development, the soul of faith and the head of business to generate results that we wouldn't get with only development, only faith or only business. In my 26 years in this work, in 108 countries, I've never seen a more promising approach to fighting poverty.”

“ICM’s VHL equips people with skills leading to stronger relationships, improved problem solving and a greater sense of well-being. One person’s improved way of thinking can cause positive change in an entire community.”

RICHARD HIRST, M Org Psych, Macquarie U

“There has been a very big change in our lives ever since ICM came here. I now realize that I am more than just an ordinary housewife. I have more friends and am more confident.”

MARY JANE
from General Santos, is one of 17 siblings, has a 2nd grade education, and is the mother of three.

Values

The poor need to overcome the negative attitudes and behaviors that accompany poverty. Feelings of passivity and inferiority are rampant. ICM’s values curriculum, based on a Biblical worldview, emphasizes the inherent value of every individual, regardless of age, gender, or income level. It promotes forgiveness, patience, self-control and perseverance. The values curriculum is taught by the pastor of the local church hosting the ICM program. Attendance at the values training is encouraged but not required.

Participants gain a wealth of “social capital” from the support provided by the community hosting the Transform Program. The relationships and connections formed in this new social network create an environment conducive to behavior change. Positive steps are reinforced and encouraged by others. Change becomes a possibility. Hope becomes a reality. There is great significance in knowing there are others who care – people who say, “you are not alone.”

SURVEY RESULTS

42% less reported physical abuse in homes
31% increase in “very satisfactory” friendships
22% fewer people living with dirt floors

7 MONTHS LATER Social capital benefits (families, friends, relatives, government officials) remain strong and reported physical abuse further reduced.

Health

Many health concerns faced by those living in extreme poverty can be resolved by education about basic health issues. ICM’s Primary Health Education training module addresses UN identified health care needs of the poor.

Family Health

- Childhood growth/development, immunizations, family planning, STDs, HIV

Hygiene and Nutrition

- Dental care, hygiene, nutrition, exercise, malnutrition, vitamin deficiencies

Common Illnesses

- Recognition, prevention and treatment
 - Tuberculosis, mosquito-borne diseases, respiratory and digestive tract illnesses, skin problems

First Aid

- Fever and convulsions, injury prevention, choking, resuscitation

SURVEY RESULTS

26% less people with serious illnesses
43% reduction in very dirty kitchens
25% more people brush their teeth

7 MONTHS LATER Health practices (use of soap and toothbrushes, clean clothing, clean kitchens) remain strong.

“My kids are eating healthier and they are now rarely sick!”

RONNIE

is married with two children and works as a gravel digger. He says ICM’s health lessons taught him about nutrition and the livelihood lessons taught him how to grow healthy food. He now earns US$70 per month selling vegetables.

“Unemployment and underemployment are the key determinants of poverty.”

ASIAN DEVELOPMENT BANK

Elwansea's life has improved significantly since joining ICM's transform program. Using skills that she learned through the livelihood lessons, she grows and sells organic vegetables and repackages household cleaning products for resale. Her family is eating better and she has started exercising. She is committed to maintaining her new lifestyle.

Livelihood

The biggest challenge facing those living in poverty is sustainable livelihood. ICM's hands-on livelihood training module provides instruction which, if implemented with reasonable commitment, results in income streams for participants.

Sustainable Organic Farming

- Hands on lessons in organic fertilizer production (through composting with worms). The worms and the compost can be sold for profit.
- Interactive training in organic container farming and in-ground farming techniques. The organic produce is used for family consumption or for sale.

Small Business Livelihood Options

- Marketing, family budgeting, saving, debt management
- Production of detergent powder, dishwashing liquid, fabric softener
- Food products: local snack preparation and packaging for sale

SURVEY RESULTS

33% increase in avg. household income

46% reduction in underweight children

29% less people who go to bed hungry several times a week

The total income of ICM participant households increased by US$4.1 MILLION This amount is more than ICM's cash operating budget.

7 MONTHS LATER Household income deteriorates somewhat but materially better than before VHL. Hunger and underweight children dramatically reduced.

In 2010-11, ICM families have produced 50,000 kilos of organic fertilizer

to start 10,000 new personal vegetable gardens

plus 72,000 m² of community farms

using 13.5 million seeds from ICM

JUMPSTART PROGRAM

JUMPSTART PROGRAM

In very poor families, parents' number one priority is feeding their children. Often education is not prioritized - 15% of poor Filipino children never attend school at all. Impoverished children don't enjoy such luxuries as children's books, educational toys and computers. This lack of educational stimuli combined with early childhood malnutrition leaves poor children at a disadvantage when it's time for school.

ICM's Jumpstart Program gives children living in poverty an academic "jumpstart" on their lifetime of learning. The Asian Development Bank says that the longer a child stays in school, the less likely they will live their lives in extreme poverty. ICM's Jumpstart Program seeks to instill graduates with a love of learning and an expectation of academic success that gives them positive footing when entering first grade. Older out-of-school children are given priority when selecting students.

Elementary Scholars

The goal of ICM’s Elementary Scholar Program is to keep our ICM learning center graduates in public school as long as possible, decreasing the probability they will live their lives in poverty. Since 2005, about 93% of our graduates are still attending public school.

Each scholar receives:

- Public School Fee Scholarships for ICM Jumpstart graduates – provides ½ of yearly costs
- Saturday “homework help” – with ICM Jumpstart teachers for academic help and encouragement

Gigie and her husband Alonzo have four children. Alonzo suffered from a stroke and is paralyzed on one side. Gigie works as a sugarcane farm laborer to support the family. She earns less than US$1 per day. Their third child, 8-year-old John, has never attended school. But this year he is enrolled in ICM’s Good Shepherd Learning Center in Bacolod. John is excited that he is finally able to attend school.

MALNOURISHED CHILDREN OUTREACH

ICM's Malnourished Children Outreach (MCO) saves lives. In coordination with local government officials, ICM identifies ten severely underweight children in each community and provides them with a nutritious meal each day. At the end of four months, two-thirds of these children will have increased their weight by at least 15%, the threshold recommended by UNICEF. This MCO program has long lasting effects: five months after the completion of the feeding program, most of the children had at least maintained their weight gain.

Meals are prepared by the partnering host church community. The food is provided through ICM's partnership with Feed My Starving Children (FMSC) and Kids Against Hunger (KAH), two US-based non-profit organizations. FMSC and KAH have together promised 19 forty-foot containers of "nutripacks", which represents more than 5 million meals. Negros Navigation provides free shipping of the food from Manila to each of ICM's bases.

In 2011/12, ICM is piloting a modified Transform-VHL course specifically for mothers of MCO children. The new curriculum emphasizes the nutritional needs of children and will be offered in 60 communities.

NETWORK

NETWORK

Every year, ICM reaches around 100,000 people with its programs that serve the poor. ICM's extensive reach is only possible due to our strategy of partnering with the existing infrastructure of local churches found in urban slums, remote rural villages and coastal fishing communities throughout the Philippines. ICM has 2,500 churches in its network.

All of ICM's programs are offered to the poor through these partnering churches. The success or failure of our programs is largely dependent on the commitment of the pastors and their church members. ICM, therefore, has a significant interest in building up the capacity of these pastors to enable them to more effectively serve their communities.

THRIVE PROGRAM

- Monthly day-long meetings for the pastors in the ICM Network.
- Provides program accountability and training
- Professional association of regional pastors – fellowship, encouragement and support
- Other training benefits include film showing and children's education materials
- Pastors receive health insurance for their families

ICM ACADEMY

- Two day seminars providing topic specific training (marriage seminars, counseling skills, leadership training, teaching methods)
- Training provided by other non-profits

MERCY PROGRAMS

Sometimes people just need help. ICM's Mercy Programs provide special assistance for those whose problems have spun out of their control.

Special Medical Cases

- ICM's special medical case program benefits hundreds of destitute patients yearly.
- SMC patients cannot afford critical medical procedures and services.
- Conditions include burn victims, hernias, broken limbs, cancer, complicated pregnancies, and other serious medical conditions.

Annual Cost: PHP7.0M / HK$1.3M / US$162K

Care Clinics

- ICM operates medical clinics at each of its five bases. They are open to the poor five days per week and each sees about 10,000 patients each year.
- ICM partners with local doctors who also volunteer their services to see indigent patients referred by ICM.

Annual Cost: PHP5.8M / HK$1.0K / US$134K

Care Recovery Shelter

- Tuberculosis remains a serious medical problem in the Philippines.
- Much needed renovations at the CRS allowed ICM to evaluate program operations during its closure from March 2011. The October 2011 CRS re-launch includes in-facility and new community-based TB treatment initiatives enabling ICM to increase yearly patient capacity from 98 to 200.

When ICM first met 23-year old Aldrin (pictured on opposite page) in 2008, he was lying immobile on a low cot in the filthy run-down shack he shared with his mother. His legs and arms were covered with infected wounds. He was malnourished. After a cooking accident, he endured third-degree burns, which quickly festered without treatment. Over the past three years, ICM has provided specialized burn treatment, skin grafts, blood transfusions, physical therapy and counseling - and as a result, Aldrin has recovered. He is overjoyed to be walking again and is now working toward his high school equivalency and volunteering at ICM's Bacolod office.

In 2008, Pakito Yenezza became ICM's CEO with an agreed three-year plan to deepen ICM's leadership. Pakito has successfully completed that objective and has accepted a new role to lead another NGO: The Global Coalition for Humanitarian Efforts in the Philippines. In his new role Pakito will continue to advocate for ICM's causes. ICM is very grateful for Pakito's leadership.

In Pakito's place, Brad Ketch has agreed to become ICM's new CEO and will join the International ICM Board of Directors. Until recently, Brad was the CEO of a US publicly listed company (Rim Semiconductor) and he has decades of experience leading telecommunications companies. For Brad, managing ICM is the culmination of a lifetime goal to use his leadership and strategy skills to help hundreds of thousands of the least fortunate.

• In 2009-10, ICM's strategic programs reached 50k people, increasing to 75K people in 2010-11 and more than 100k people in 2012, a 41% compound growth rate.

• ICM substantially increased the size of its operations while keeping support costs relatively flat. Thus, the support percentage falls from 11% in 2010-11 to only 7% in 2011-12.

“Most development nonprofits would not take on the amount of work ICM is attempting even with a significantly greater budget. Rarely have I encountered an organization doing so much, so well, with relatively limited resources.”

PETER CLARK, M (Public Policy) Harvard, Phd (Social Science) Cornell

NOTES:

• ICM's increased budget for 2011-12 is almost entirely attributable to the massive increase in donated food. Value of food donated to ICM was US$0.3M in 2010-11 and US$1.4M in 2011-12.

• ICM's cash expenses were US$2.422M in 2010-11 and US$2.749M in 2011-12, a 13% increase. This increase is attributable to peso appreciation and to enhanced discipline in execution.

Our Donors

ICM is generously supported by a wide variety of donors. Last year, 30% of our donations were from major donors (more than HK$100k per individual), 43% from other Hong Kong donors, 12% from corporations, 5% from churches and 10% from USA donors. At least ten percent of ICM's income is donated by our board members.

ICM's donations from corporate donors is growing. We would like to recognize the special assistance given by the Macquarie Group Foundation, who generously fund ICM's capacity building efforts in the USA. Goldman Sachs and the Lancashire Group have each made sizable contributions to ICM, and the Royal Bank of Scotland has chosen ICM as one of its target charities. BGC made ICM one of the recipients of its charity day, and ICM is the official charity for iFortress. Among the companies that match employee contributions to ICM: Macquarie Group, Goldman Sachs, RBS and Deutsche Bank.

ICM also runs vision trips that connect donors to the children, families and communities that their gifts support. Offered throughout the year, visitors from corporations, schools, youth groups and individual families experience the impact of ICM's work. In 2010-11, ICM hosted 43 different groups with 376 people coming to paint walls, pour concrete, build toilets, train teachers, distribute goods, organize children's camps and teach health and livelihood lessons to program participants.
